Coolidge Tells Congress Main Business Is Taxes

By WM. J. LOSH
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Dec. 6.—President Coolidge in a special message transmitting the budget for the 1925 fiscal year, today called on Congress to reduce taxes.

He endorsed in full the Mellon program to cut taxes $233,000,000. He opposed the soldier bonus as deadly to the hope of tax relief and as not a proper obligation to the veterans.

The time has come, he said, to share the benefits of government economies past and in prospect, with the people by reducing the tax burden.

His stress on the budget estimates will permit immediate and coordinated relief; enactment of extraordinary appropriation measures not contemplated in the budget will do that, the president declared.

The budget transmitted by Mr. Coolidge provided for governmental expenditures of $3,298,080,444 during the 1925 fiscal year, $256,957,644 less than the current year, and the lowest yearly expenditure of the government since before the war.

Specifically, the executive asked for appropriations of $3,018,069,946, the difference between the appropriation and expenditures being due to the fact that Congress makes some appropriations which carry over from year to year.

A surplus of $395,681,634 in the government's financial operations for the fiscal year was estimated, as compared with an estimated surplus of $129,499,824 this year and an actual surplus of $209,657,460 in the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1923.

The total receipt of the government during the next fiscal year were estimated at $3,633,762,078, as compared with $3,577,712 during the current year, a decrease of $56,050,066. These estimates are based on present taxes and include a back tax collection of approximately $250,000,000.

Standing among the estimates for appropriations for the fiscal year 1925 was the item for interest on the public debt, amounting to $900,000,000. Federal only to this was the estimate for the veterans' bureau of $11,000,000.

Next in size were the appropriations as set for the war and interior department, respectively $336,441,000 and $299,412,600. The navy estimate stood fifth at $274,499,054.

With the exception of the postoffice, commerce and justice departments which obtained increases, estimates submitted for the executive departments and independent offices were almost all below appropriations provided for them for the current fiscal year.

The principal appropriations asked follow:
Legislative establishments, $117,744,836, decrease $700,000.
Department of Agriculture, $39,590,575, decrease $15,000,000.
Commerce, $24,948,025, increase $1,000,000.
Interior, $299,412,600, decrease $26,000,000.
Labor, $6,702,565, decrease $890,000.
Navy $274,499,054, decrease $20,000,000.
State, $4,988,446, decrease $403,900.
Treasury, $149,986,065, decrease $9,000,000.
War $336,441,002, decrease $13,000,000.

Postoffice department, payable out of postal receipts and not by appropriation $613,093,143, increase $28,000,000.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE TO THE SIXTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4.—(United Press)—President Coolidge's message to Congress today bristled with crisp, pithy sentences. Here are some of them:

We attend to our own affairs  but we recognize thoroughly our obligation to help others. Partisanship has no place in our foreign relations. I do not propose to make merchandise of any American principles. We shall persevere in well doing, not by force, but by reason. To reduce war taxes is to give every home a better chance. Free government has no greater menace than disrespect for authority.

A people who neglect their national defense are putting in jeopardy their national honor. The humanitarian side of government should not be repressed, but cultivated. American institutions rest solely on good citizenship. Those who do not want to be partakers of the American spirit should not settle in America.

It is necessary not only to have faith, but to make sacrifices for our faith.

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Dec. 6.—Tax reduction must have right of way over all other legislation, President Coolidge declared today in his first message to Congress.

"Of all services which the Congress can render to the country, I have no hesitation in declaring this one to be paramount," he said. "The country wants this measure to have the right of way over all others."

He is opposed to a soldier bonus the President said flatly and without qualifications.

Message Crisply Worded

The message, more eagerly awaited by the country than any president's utterance in years, was a crisply worded document that covered virtually every problem confronting the administration and the country. It was a series of clear, concise, exceedingly definite statements and recommendations. It left no doubt on every subject he discussed.

In sentences which, like his exact statements on tax reduction and the bonus, defied distortion or misinterpretation of his attitude, Mr. Coolidge said that:

The senate should approve the Harding world court. The League of Nations is "a closed be sold to somebody who will produce cheap fertilizer.

Every citizen should help uphold the prohibition law.

The army and navy should be strengthened.

The negro problem should be dealt with at once by Congress.

Coal prices should be reduced and the government be given emergency powers to prevent fuel famines and profiteering.

The Monroe doctrine should be upheld.

Russia cannot be recognized until she repents.

Death of Harding

Mr. Coolidge opened his message with an announcement to Congress of the death of President Harding, and paid his predecessor this tribute:

"He has left his mark upon history. He has made justice more certain and peace more secure."

Congress and his administration face the duty, the President said, of developing and supporting the Harding policies.

From his brief word of eulogy, Mr. Coolidge swung directly into his message, with no waste of words. He first took up:

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

America is at peace with everybody, he said, and her desire is to perpetuate that peace by granting and requiring full justice. An American policy—guiding our own business, recognizing our obligation to help others, but reserving to the decision of our own judgment the time, the place and the method—must guide her. Neither he nor the senate purposes any change towards the league of nations.

"America has taken her place in the world... free, independent, powerful. The best service that can be rendered to humanity is the assurance that this place will be maintained," President asserted.

Washington, Dec. 4.—(United Press)—Here is President Coolidge's tribute to the late President Harding, voiced at the beginning of his message to Congress today:

"Since the close of the last Congress, the nation has lost President Harding. The world knew his kindness and his humanity, his greatness and his character. He has left his mark upon history. He has made justice more certain and peace more secure. The surpassing tribute paid to his memory as he was borne across the continent to rest at last at home revealed the place he held in the hearts of the American people. But this is not the place for extended reference to the man or his work. In this presence, among those who knew and loved him, that is unnecessary. But we who were associated with him could not resume together the functions of our office without pausing for a moment, and in his memory re-associating ourselves to the service of our country. He is gone. We remain. It is our duty under the inspiration of his example, to take up the burdens which he was permitted to lay down, and to develop and support the wise principles of government which he represented."

WORLD COURT

Declaring he is in accord with the traditional policy of avoiding alliance, and of settling international disputes peacefully, Mr. Coolidge said he favors a court including the whole world. As the Harding world court plan pending before the senate is the "only practical plan on which many nations have ever agreed, though it may not meet every desire, therefore I commend it to favorable consideration of the senate with the proposed reservations clearly indicating our refusal to adhere to the league of nations," he said.

He urged the court be considered without partisanship and pointed out that it is "merely a convenient instrument of adjustment to which we could go, but to which we could not be brought."

RUSSIA

"Russia must show 'works meet for repentance' before American recognition will be accorded, the President said. Desiring friendship with the Russian people, America 'ought to be the first to go to the economic and moral rescue' of Russia when that nation meets the conditions, he said. There is no objection to Americans trading with Russia, but 'our government does not propose to enter into relations with another regime which refuses to recognize the sanctity of international obligations. I do not propose to barter away for the privilege of trade any of the cherished rights of humanity. I do not propose to make merchandise of any American principles.'"

The President said he is, however, ready to make "very large concessions for the purpose of rescuing the people of Russia." Encouraging evidence of Russian return to the ways of ordinary society are to be detected, but there must be more, he said. Conditions precedent to American recognition, he said, are: Compensation of Americans despoiled by Russian seizure of the debt incurred by the Russian Republic, and abatement of "the active spirit of enmity to our institutions."

PRESIDENT BEGAN SPEAKING TO THE CONGRESS PROMPTLY AT 12:28 P. M.

Washington, Dec. 6.—Congress assembled at noon today and shortly afterward united with the House in a joint session while millions of people, scattered over more than half the states of the union, listened for the first word of the President's address, transmitted from the Capitol by radio.

The President left the White House a few minutes after noon, timing his arrival at the Capitol so as to appear on the speaker's rostrum at 12:28.

Mrs. Coolidge arrived in the House gallery two minutes before the House met at noon. The House and galleries arose and applauded her. Mrs. Coolidge's salmon colored dress was covered with a long, tan coat, with

HUNTING NEWS

The deer hunters continue to blaze away at the lordly buck in the mountains of Clearfield County and from early reports, and despite the wet and unfavorable weather, this year's kill will eclipse the record-breaker of last year.

The slaughter of does has also been quite heavy thus far. On the first day of the hunting season, no less than ten illegal deer were found in the Penfold road country, while on Tuesday evening three does and a "spike" buck, whose horns were too short were brought up from the Karthaus region on the River Line train.

Clearfield hunters were among the successful ones during the early days of the hunting season, but Pitch Pine camp, under the leadership of Eddie Schenck, on Tuesday last went out and bowled four extra fine bucks over, and then called it a day. The biggest one of the bunch fell to the rifle of Bob Samis. It sported ten points and is an especially fine specimen.

William Lambert, of 1210 Dorey street, downed a fine 160-pound buck on the Rockton road.

AIR MAIL FLYER VERY NARROWLY ESCAPES DEATH IN A SEVENTY FT. PLUNGE TO EARTH

Castalia, Ohio, Dec. 6.—With the control broken, a U. S. mail plane in charge of Pilot Carl Brown, en route to Chicago from Cleveland, fell 70 feet in flames, Brown suffering broken legs and severe burns.

Walter Sedgewick, station agent of the Erie, who rushed to the flaming plane, saved Brown's life. He suffered slight burns in freeing Brown from the wreckage.

Conservatives Certain To Win By 30 Seats In British Election Today

London, Dec. 6.—A Conservative victory was in the making today as 150,000,000 British men and women went to the polls to elect their parliament. It was cloudy and cold and a light mist fell in some parts of the country when the voting booths opened at 8:00 a. m.

There was no change, however, in the situation that pointed to a Conservative majority with about thirty members to spare.

The result of the voting will be announced tonight. The final result will not be known until Friday. There are 564 seats to be filled, for which there are 1400 candidates.

ATLANTIC 'SHINE NOT TO BE GIVEN UP WITHOUT FIGHT

The moonshine manufactured in and around Atlantic No. 2 in Bigler township is said to be quite good stuff—for moonshine, and Adolf Dufour, whose place was raided a couple of weeks ago, at least believes the forty or fifty gallons captured by the officers is worth putting up a fight for.

The Dufour home was raided on Nov. 23d, by Sheriff Lowell, Officer Russell Love, of DuBois, Constable A. L. Sunderlin, of Clearfield and State Trooper Wolfkill. Information, which resulted in the warrant for Dufour was made by Trooper W. K. Hill. The raid resulted in the seizing of four ten gallon bags of "shine," fourteen quart bottles full, together with a jug or two of the stuff while two and one-half barrels of mash were destroyed.

A search warrant was issued by Sheriff Joseph F. John, of Clearfield, for the use of the raiders. Dufour and his wife were arrested and placed under $1,000 bail for court by Sheriff James W. Ruffner at Madera.

On November 27th, attorneys Hamilton Formyth & Bell presented a petition to the Clearfield county court asking that a rule be granted on Sheriff Lowell, District Attorney Arnold and the other officers, asking them to show cause why the liquor taken from the Dufour home should not be returned to Adolf Dufour and that the prosecution be enjoined from using any part of the case as evidence against the Dufours.

The petition filed alleges the search warrant was defective, in that as issued from the Justice's office it contained no name of premises or description of property, such necessary requirements having been added by the officers after same had been received from the Justice of the Peace, also that the officials failed to make known they had a search warrant, did not read same to the defendants, but forced their way into the house and instituted their search.

It is further contended by the attorneys for Dufour that the complaint made by Wolfkill for the search warrant does not show any particular violation of the Act of Assembly, nor conform to the search "warrant act" of March 23, 1923 but contains an averment of the violation of a great number of the provisions of the Act, some of which violations the officers making the complaint did not have possible cause to believe existed; all of which is contrary to the

Amaka Club Gets Under Way With Big Dinner At Jordan Cafe Wednesday

Yesterday at noon the Amaka Club held its first club meeting, with a dinner at the Jordan hotel. The club has been organized for the Juniors and Sophomore boys of the high school and has as its purpose the helping to promote Clean Speech, Clean Sports and Clean Living. Mr. Steel, a member of the high school faculty, will lead the boys in their club work and programs, and last night he met with the officers and the governing board to draw up a constitution. The first meeting yesterday was attended by twenty-three of the young men, but at a special meeting of the club to be held at the Y on Friday night it is hoped to have the full 50.

At the dinner meetings, the business men of town will speak to the boys on topics that will be of interest to the fellows. The social times will be on Friday evenings about once a month.

At yesterday's dinner J. H. Thomas of Community Service spoke to the boys on Clubs and Purposes of them presenting to the fellows the possibilities that are tied up in a group of fellows and the value there is in doing things. Mr. Steel then spoke giving his suggestions for further procedure and urged the fellows to work as one.

The officers of the organization are President Kenneth Davis; Vice President Fred Sheeder; Secretary James Keating; Treasurer, Ray Maurer.

Lieutenant Griffls Scores Bergdoll When Called On To Answer German Law

Mossbach, Germany, Dec. 6.—"I only wanted to get the coward and traitor, Grover Cleveland Bergdoll back to America. I acted only from motives of patriotism," Lieutenant C. H. Griffls of Ohio, declared today when his trial for assault and battery in connection with the attempted kidnapping of the notorious Philadelphia draft dodger opened.

Griffls assumed entire responsibility for the affair. The others, who were with him when the kidnapping attempt failed, will also be tried.

Bergdoll himself was present at the trial, swaggering arrogantly and accompanied by his body guard. The court house was crowded.

Griffls, who with several companions, one of whom was killed by the slacker, tried to take Bergdoll from the Eberbach Hotel last fall and hustle him into a waiting automobile, the plan being to rush him across the border into France, described the attempt today, testifying he had no intention of killing Bergdoll.

"Y" POOL READY FOR SWIMMERS

Many members of the Y. M. C. A. who have anticipated a refreshing swim in the "Y" pool, will be delighted to know, that during the present week the water has been changed and that the pool has had a thorough cleaning. For the past three days the water has been running through the filters and at the same time being heated which will leave no doubt but that it is absolutely pure and of a normal temperature.

Many have already taken advantage of the privilege as well as using the gymnasium. The gym committee and new director are greatly encouraged with the attendance and are now at work planning the winter activities of which an announcement will be made in a few days.

Public Utilities Of State Planning Big Increase In Charges

Clearfield, Pa., Dec. 6.—Many public utilities in Pennsylvania will increase their rates from 50 to 100 percent, starting January 1st, if their new rate schedules proposed by the Public Utilities Commission are approved.

Applications for rate increases were received by the commission last week. The commission is now considering the proposals. The utilities are asking for increases in rates for gas, electric and telephone service.

SUN YAT SEN CAN'T SEIZE CUSTOMS HOUSE

Peking, Dec. 6.—France and Britain intervened today to prevent Sun Yat Sen, former dictator of South China, who now is warring against the government of the North, from seizing the customs house at Canton.

The southern general had announced his intention of taking over the customs, which are under foreign control, although the money is paid to the Northern government. The British marines joined a French land party, which fortified the customs house to get in line with building.

SPOKEN FOR THE PEOPLE

President Coolidge's first message to Congress was a digest of his opinion on vital national problems. It was not an arbitrary prescription for the "good of the people" whether they wanted it or not. His message is proof that the President recognizes it his duty as chief executive to serve public opinion, not to mold it to his personal liking.

1. Urging Congress to give the right of way to tax reduction, the President has exhibited keen insight into the will of the people. His first thought is for the public and its welfare.

Whether in agreement or disagreement with the President's attitude on the soldiers' bonus, the public at large must respect his courage in his convictions and reconcile his anti-bonus program with his concern in tax reduction. National legislation and advantage must come before class legislation if the nation is not to be retarded in its return to normalcy.

President Coolidge's position on foreign relations is concise and permits of no misinterpretation. "The League of Nations is a closed incident," he advised Congress, after recommending approval of the Harding World Court and expressing renewed faith in the Monroe Doctrine.

There should be general satisfaction in the President's opposition against "tinkering" with the Fordney-McCumber tariff and which he and the country as well credit with bringing prosperity and abundant revenue.

None of the national questions which are uppermost in the mind of the people were omitted in the message to Congress. He contends the farmer must first help himself before being given government aid. Muscle Shoals must be used for the production of cheap fertilizer, prohibition must be enforced, lynchings and violence must cease, government regulation of coal production and production is necessary, national defenses must be strengthened and more rigid immigration laws enacted. The President did not even forget a child labor amendment to the constitution and a federal department of education with a commissioner of education in the cabinet.

President Coolidge founded his message to Congress on a basis to promote national prosperity, tranquility and progress and to comply with the will of the majority as he sees it.

CARELESS

To err is human, but since most errors are the result of carelessness it is just as human to be careless. There is no greater testimonial to human carelessness than the United States mail. It is not surprising since the average American is now so busy with the mails, and human actions and habits best reflect his traits.

Through carelessness 200,000,000 pieces of mail were lost in the United States in 1922. Incorrect or insufficient addresses were the chief reasons. Of those which went astray, 17,000,000 wound up at the dead letter office. If the address of the letter was found inside, the mail eventually found its way back to that address, if not it was lost forever.

If the dead letter office mail comprised letters of no importance, advertising matter and other articles of little value, it would be little cause for concern in this tendency toward

RECIPE FOR MAKING DILL PICKLES

Preparing the Brine for Dill Pickles.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Dill pickles are made from fresh or salted cucumbers (the former are choicer, says the United States Department of Agriculture, but the latter have better keeping qualities). Employ pickled dill seed or herb and "dill spice," composed of allspice, black pepper, coriander seed and bay leaves, in addition to the brine.

Soak 100 cucumbers in a 30-degree brine (about 15 ounces of salt to 5 quarts of water) until the brine will give an acid test, i. e., turns red when tested with litmus paper (which may be bought at a drug store). Drain and arrange in layers in a crock, putting in a layer of cherry or grape leaves first, then the cucumbers, then a few cloves, the dill, a few small pieces of red pepper and then the leaves. Continue until the crock is full. Cover with the brine which was drained off and to which has been added one-half cupful of mustard seed, one-half cupful of horseradish and one-half cupful of salt. Cover with a light weight and seal airtight with paraffin for winter use.

APPLE PECTIN SIRUP
MAKES GOOD JELLIES

Concentrated Product Useful at Any Time of Year.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The up-to-date home jelly maker knows that fruit juices must contain acid, sugar, and pectin in the right proportions in order to make good jellies. Lemon or other sour fruit juice, she has found, can be added to give acid if needed, and the right proportion of sugar is fairly easy to determine, but how to supply pectin is often a serious difficulty. Yet it is frequently the cause that failures in jelly making are the result of too low a proportion of pectin in the fruit juice.

Some fruits and vegetables are very rich in pectin, particularly when slightly underripe, while others contain only a trace or none at all. Yet some of the juices lacking in pectin, such as strawberry, cherry, rhubarb, and peach, are otherwise ideal for jelly making. Apples and currants are among the pectin-rich fruits, and housekeepers discovered long ago that the juice of various other fruits would make good jelly if combined with either of these. But for several reasons this practice is not always desirable. The United States Department of Agriculture has therefore perfected a home method of making concentrated pectin sirups that can be kept on hand for use at any time and added in small quantities to many kinds of fruit juices to insure success in jelly making.

Firm, hard, tart apples, underripe rather than overripe, have been found excellent for making this pectin sirup. Even apples of insipid flavor such as Ben Davis, may be used, and the fruits need not be perfect if sound and unblemished.

Wash and scrub the apples thoroughly, and without paring or coring them, cut them in thin slices.

Recipe for Apple Pectin Sirup.

4 pounds of apples 4 1/2 pints of water
Slice the apples thin; this is better than passing them through a meat grinder, since finely ground apples darken very quickly, and impart an unattractive color to the pectin extract. Place in a granite saucepan large enough so that the whole mass can be brought quickly to boiling. Cover the pan and boil the mixture rapidly for twenty minutes. Rapid boiling is recommended because it seems to preserve color and flavor better than long, slow boiling, and extracts the pectin with less danger of decomposing it through overheating. When the boiling is finished, strain the mass through four thicknesses of cheesecloth until the juice ceases to drip. It is not advisable to squeeze the bag; but the pumice, or pulp, may be lightly pressed with a spoon toward the end of the dripping period, to force the flow of the last drops of the juice.

When dripping is complete, remove the pumice from the bag, weigh or measure it, return it to the saucepan, and add an equal quantity of water. Boil again for twenty minutes, and strain. The first two extractions should together amount to about three quarts. Mix these together in a wide granite pan, such as a dish pan, large enough so that the liquid will not be more than two inches deep. Heat rapidly until the liquid is reduced to one-fourth of its original volume, or to about 1 1/2 pints, this usually requires from 30 to 45 minutes. The concentration should be carried on rapidly, since it is easy to injure the pectin if the boiling process continues for several hours.

The concentrated juice is a thick sirupy liquid which usually has a strong apple flavor; its color varies from dark to light reddish brown according to the kind of apples used, the color of their skins, and the promptness with which the material has been handled. When cold, there is a heavy sediment, which contains considerable pectin.

Pectin sirup rightly used improves the quality of jelly; it should therefore be used with rich full-flavored juices that lack pectin and could not otherwise be made into jelly successfully. Pectin sirup should never be used to conceal the inferiority of watered juices.

Jellies of excellent texture can be made from the juice of strawberries, black or red raspberries, ripe grapes, sweet non-acid plums, ripe quinces, rhubarb, and other fruits, by combining this pectin sirup in the proportion of four tablespoonfuls to one cupful of the fruit juice. The jelly is made in the usual way, except that the pectin sirup is added to the hot strained juice after the sugar has been dissolved in it and just as it begins to boil.

GOOD IDEA FOR PIN MONEY

Texas Home Demonstration Agent Reports Much Work in Planting Flowers and Cereals.

Dried winter bouquets have been more and more used within the past few years, and from Bea County, Texas, the home demonstration agent reports to the United States Department of Agriculture that a great deal of work has been done in tinting wild flowers, pine cones and grasses for this purpose. Here is an idea for pin money and also for the skillful-fingered woman to brighten up her home when fresh cut flowers are not available. From Mississippi come large flowers resembling dahlias, made of parts of pine cones, tinted deep red, lavender, and other dahlia colors, with enamel paint. These are combined with dried sprays of bamboo leaves to make an effective filling for a table vase or hall bowl.

Desserts can be made more attractive if served in a glass dish on a small dolly.

Floor mops should be washed out once every two weeks in strong soda and water and put in the open air to dry.

Kerosene oil spots can be removed easily with fuller's earth. Cover the spots thickly with a layer of the hot earth and let it remain on 24 hours.

sentimental significance to the fact that the Perry monument—marking the spot, some distance south of Yokohama, where Perry first landed—was undamaged, although everything else in all that section was demolished or very badly wrecked. Also there is an old tree in the grounds of the destroyed British Consulate at Yokohama—a tree that before the earthquake was venerably beautiful. Tradition accented herabouths, but of uncertain historic accuracy, has it that Perry's first treaty or agreement with the Shogun was signed under that tree. Whatever the historical facts may be, the people believe Perry signed his treaty there. And the noble old tree was killed by the fire—first, green shoots are already springing up from the ground beside the trunk. And the Japanese say this is a portent from the gods—that it means American-Japanese friendship cannot be killed.

There is a sentimental side, too, in the way the people feel about Ambassador Woods. It isn't entirely a mere matter of dollars and cents and American sending more stuff than any body else and doing it first. It is also the fact that Woods was burned out, a refugee just like the commonest coolie; that he and his family rained around helplessly all night with millions of Japanese; that they slept in some byway on mats given by an unknown Japanese.

"One of us," say Japanese. "He is one of us," is the way they feel about it. Mrs. Marshand, the aged mother-in-law of the Ambassador, was injured by a falling timber which cut her upon the breast. The injury was not regarded as serious, but an operation may become necessary. She is 80 years old and Woods thought it best for her to go home for treatment and he decided to go to Philadelphia with her. That devotion to a parent—which the Japanese regard as the very highest duty and virtue—also made a tremendous appeal.

Since the earthquake Woods has been given tributes and ovation greatly surpassing any demonstrations the Japanese have ever shown a foreigner. And the important thing is they mean it. They mean it for the ambassador personally—and they mean it for America.

DROPPED TODAY

You'll appreciate this good news. During November—and quite against our wishes—we were forced to raise the price of oysters. We might have kept the price down and lowered the quality, but we kept quality up, taking it for granted that you wanted the best. But now comes the break in the market and we are glad to be able to tell you that we have lowered prices.

LEADERS ALWAYS NEEDED
By FLORENCE DAVIES

A strange bit of news came out of the story of the terrible disaster which overtook Japan last summer.

Although the first shocks were felt at five minutes before noon on Saturday, it was five o'clock before the Japanese made a move to organize relief.

What was the matter? Was it the vastness of the catastrophe which utterly overwhelmed everyone, blighting consciousness itself and paralyzing action? Or, was it merely that the eastern mind is not trained to assume individual responsibility?

It is hard to say what western minds would have done under the circumstances. Perhaps the very vastness of the disaster would have left our own citizens utterly void of ideas and inarticulate.

It must be remembered, of course, that the usual avenues of relief were doubtless closed. The normal people to act were probably dead.

What would you do if your house tumbled down about your ears? Fly to the telephone. But wait, the wires are down. Call the police!—Where are they? Run to the fire station! It is in ruins. So prompt action was not easy.

And yet, it is still safe to say that it would not have taken what was left of us, five hours to get into action.

The youngest cub reporter on our home town paper would have pulled himself together in ten minutes and in half an hour he would have had relief trains moving from all over the country.

Isn't it just the difference between a race of people who have had to break their trail as they journeyed, and a country in which the newest road is a thousand years old?

Here in the new world we have to think and act for ourselves. In the old world, customs are fixed, and things are as they are. True, they have mastered and forgotten arts that we never knew and may never hope to learn. They have a culture which is beyond the limits of western science and efficiency. But they have paid for their century old bondage to tradition by a certain lack of resourcefulness. Individual initiative which a younger people must acquire if it is ever to justify its existence.

Every year we live life gets a little easier for us here. There's a certain danger in that for our youngsters. Making things too easy is a bad way to cultivate resourcefulness. That's a tip worth remembering. But it will probably be several generations, at least, before we get an earthquake would find us without a plan of action for a half a day.

Let's keep right on training our young people to think and act for themselves, for in every situation whether in peace or war, security or disaster, leaders are always needed.

THE WEST

By M. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(By McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

YETTY was eating breakfast at the Valley View ranch when the daughter of the house, home from an eastern finishing school, dressed and sat down opposite Will Oakes, a father's assistant manager.

The house of conversation continued with Ronelle, her hunger appeared, and on the table, "Tasty!" an eastern friend—yes, a masculine one with an eye to see how it was, "who is going to stop off?" "I'd like to show him a thing or two," she said.

"You drew her brother out of the stuff. You want us to pose for the camera and Quick-on-the-Draw?"

"No, all broke in Ronelle cool. I merely wish to prove that we are not as easterners when we are in the know how to dress a sister."

"I shall see," said Jim in disgust. "There's an extra outfit of clothes of that sort for fifty miles."

"No, Ronelle persisted, "I know you to get them. The movie people at least let camp down by the creek with the light doing misery stuff. They'll see us there, 'mope and fish.' I don't believe Jack Thorpe told me."

In her triumph she failed to observe that the time she really drew blood to the creek. The newcomer was a woman of a different kind, but the leading man of the "movie's Revenge" already of him glowing.

When Higginson Brooks descended from his train he found awaiting him a man in a crumpled blue frock coat at the wheel of an eight-cylinder car.

Reaching the car at one spot on route to the ranch, she let her guest feast his eyes on the valley spread below which ran the creek which she regarded her father's land.

"This is the place," she exclaimed, "where the West began."

"Yes," said Ronelle apologetically, "but we are rather where the movie people are."

"You reached in the side pocket and pulled out a pair of glasses. 'See what is going on out there,' she said to him. 'That's all right and out—' she handed him a glass."

There was a moment's silence as they gazed at the landscape. "Why—there seems to be a number of horses dragging an animal or—"

"That's a horse," said Ronelle, and to her surprise, she was right. With a gasp, she turned her eyes with her hand to the sound. "I had forgotten. Poor Link! Auto stealing. But I always liked Link."

"But what will they do? Surely they won't shoot him?"

"No, Ronelle's eyes were properly directed. "They just drag them out and shoot—well, it's always been so."

Higginson regarded the glasses and said to her for some time. Then he spoke to her who has been waiting for her. "Miss Ronelle, I had a great reason for coming West. I have a horse of interest in me."

"But it is a horse who considered herself a bit hard at working off propolis, and she was on the gas, and what was her occupation was about to say, 'behold by a rough down grade down under at the very entrance to be back."

"No, Ronelle contemplated nothing as to being a guest in for appearing in sport with the rest of her men were dinner clothes. She let her necessary hint so that some one at the meal the only embargo on the side of those who were in the room made for their own amusement."

After an hour of the starlit evening, I saw Ronelle's father with whom Ronelle conversed rather than with Ronelle who sat in the couch and looked and realized miserably that she was not seldom pays.

"I've heard the intended victim of her father's remark. 'I've quite an interest in the movie company I saw in this afternoon down in our meadows. I own considerable of the stock and Thorpe, the leading man, is engaged to my cousin. Thought I'd mention him today. Incidentally, he's a good actor."

Ronelle sat out of the hammock and came out down in a seat nearby. "I've heard she had something to do with Will. And it was there he found her."

The time with which she greeted him was obviously fearful that he would be promoted to something. "What is it?"

"I have having made a fool of myself," she said.

"There's a part of us then," commented Will. Then, as he remembered how he felt in a coat that was too tight with sleeves that were too short, "You certainly made one of us."

Ronelle started up indignantly. "You, too," she cried and her voice broke.

There was one thing to do, Will thought. He gave her in his arms and said, "Forgive me, darling," he whispered. "I'll never mention it again. And Ronelle believed him."

Almost broke him.

message that in addition to these appropriations he would shortly ask it to provide an additional $20,000,000, with which to purchase more equipment for the coast guard, to enable it to cope more adequately with rum runners. If granted, he will later ask $8,000,000 more for the same purpose. He said these appropriations, he said, would be charged against the current fiscal year.

While dwelling on this subject, Mr. Coolidge called particular attention to congress to the increase of $1,600,000 in 1925 estimates for prohibition enforcement, indicating his desire that the money be provided.

The estimates for the war and navy departments provide for the continuation of the present personnel of the service no money being provided for the increases in man power sought by Secretaries Weeks and Denby.

Sources of revenue for the fiscal year 1925, were estimated in the budget as follows:

Income and profits tax $1,800,000,000, a decrease of $50,000,000 from estimated receipts from this source for the current year.

Miscellaneous, internal revenue $927,555,000, a decrease of $6,000,000.

Customs receipts, $493,000,000, a decrease of $17,000,000.

Miscellaneous receipts $473,77,078, a decrease of $67,000,000.

The British government, Mr. Coolidge said in his message, under the terms of its debt agreement with this country will pay $160,000,000 into the treasury next year, probably in Liberty bonds. Under the law these will be retired.

Mr. Coolidge opened his budget message with a concise review of the country's finances since the war. He pointed out that since August, 1919, when the national debt was at its peak of $26,500,000,000, it has been reduced nearly $4,500,000,000. He then plunged immediately into his recommendation for tax reduction.

"The American people have given a truly magnificent demonstration of patience and patriotism during the years in which they have borne this burden," Mr. Coolidge said.

"In less than seven years, to put the matter very briefly, we have spent $40,000,000,000 and we have paid from current revenues $18,000,000,000, or nearly half the amount."

"Certainly the nation which has thus patiently persisted in meeting the enormous burden of governmental costs, is entitled at the earliest possible moment to the largest measure of relief from these burdens that can possibly be accorded."

"I am convinced that the time has now come to extend this relief thru a substantial reduction in taxation and the fiscal program which is crystallized in the budget estimates which are herewith transmitted to the congress is based on this purpose."

"We are all familiar with the facts that the larger part of the tax burden arises not from the exactions of the federal government, but from the governmental costs of states and municipalities."

"It is therefore highly desirable that an example of determined and insistent economy be set by the federal government for the sake of its influence upon every body which possesses the authority to levy taxes. I am finally persuaded that if the national government will reduce its expenditures and its levies under the program which is presented to you here with, it will have a highly salutary effect in inducing greater economies in all other departments of public taxation."

The President then referred to the $300,000,000 surplus existing in the treasury as a result of cautious economies during the fiscal year ended June 30, last, and the surpluses of slightly larger amounts foreseen for the fiscal year 1924 and 1925 by the budget bureau.

"I have in mind," he said, "that the taxpayers are the stockholders of the business corporations of the United States and that if this business is having a surplus of receipts, the taxpayers should share therein in some manner."

Having in mind that the chief executive contemplates that the chief executive under the fortunate situation now find ourselves shall make such recommendations as in his opinion the public interests require, I recommend a revision of tax laws along lines which will effect a reduction of income taxes by taxing earned income more lightly than income from business or from investments; by reducing the percentages of the normal tax, and by reducing the surtax rates, with commencement of their application at $10,000 instead of $20,000.

"I also recommend repeal of the tax on telegrams, telephones, and leased wires, and of the tax on admissions and revision of the miscellaneous taxes which are a source of inconvenience to tax payers and difficult to collect."

"On the other hand, amendments which would cause some increase of revenue should also be made to existing income tax laws relative to deductions of capital losses; deductions from gross income for interest paid and non-business losses sustained, where income from tax exempt securities is involved; and the manner of taxing community incomes. These changes would reduce taxes by more than $300,000,000, which is safely within the probable surplus."

"It would not take much, however, to exhaust this margin, and any program of new expenditure on a large scale would make tax reduction impossible for years to come."

"I know of nothing which will give the people of this nation greater assurance that we are unalterably committed to a campaign of economy in public expenditure than a reduction of our present taxation."

"It would certainly tend to align the whole people in support of economical administration of government, and I frankly state that such an alignment is becoming every day more and more necessary because of the influence which it will have upon the states and the other lesser subdivisions of our body politic."

The President then sounded the death knell of the soldiers' bonus unless Congress should desire and would be able to pass one over the President's veto.

careless mailing. That the condition is not to be brushed aside without serious thought is evident from the postal department's report that money aggregating $100,000 was recovered by the dead letter office from "lost" mail in 1922.

Letters go astray by the thousands on every day of the year and those who send mail during the Christmas season are no more careless than those who patronize the mails during other seasons, but in view of the abundance of Christmas mail and the sentiment and possibility of disappointment attached to each bit of Christmas mail, it is the duty of every patron of Uncle Sam's postal service to wrap carefully and address more carefully. Carelessly mailed mail inconveniences the postal employees just a little, but if it is lost it means much to those at both ends of its proposed journey.

action carries with it an obligation not to embark upon an extraordinary expenditure program, I am not unmindful of the demand for adjusted compensation for soldiers of the world war which would include among its beneficiaries the able bodied of our veterans as well as the disabled," Mr. Coolidge said.

A question if there is any sound reason for such a measure," he continued. "The country is prosperous, and remunerative employment is available for the able bodied veteran, as well as for other citizens. For the disabled veterans of the war and the dependents of those who fell, the country cannot do too much."

"It has already spent nearly two billion dollars and is now spending nearly half a billion dollars yearly to their benefit. That obligation it must and will continue to fulfill in full measure."

"But the fit and able bodied veterans are offered the opportunities open to every other citizen. The government has no money to distribute to any class of its citizens that it does not take from the pockets of the people and the payment of a bonus to millions of our former soldiers could only be accomplished at a cost to the whole community, including the veterans themselves, far outweighing the benefits to be conferred."

"If I felt that a soldiers' bonus represented a great need and proper obligation which could be fulfilled by this nation I certainly would not make a recommendation which would be adverse thereto."

"On the other hand, amendments which would cause some increase of revenue should also be made to existing income tax laws relative to deductions of capital losses; deductions from gross income for interest paid and non-business losses sustained, where income from tax exempt securities is involved; and the manner of taxing community incomes. KASS GOT 85 NEW MEMBERS

Detroit Legion Worker Won Trip to National Convention for His Rapid-Fire Hustling.

John Kass, a member of the Charles A. Learned post of the American Legion in Detroit, made the Legion national hall of fame recently when he enrolled 85 new members for his post. As a prize for winning the contest he received a trip to the Legion national convention in San Francisco with all transportation expenses paid by the post.

The most formidable rival Kass developed in the contest which lasted about two and one-half months was "Pete" Kolbe who obtained 65 members. Both of the contestants worked hard during the last four days of the race. Kolbe obtained 13 new members but this record was beaten by Kass who speeded up the home stretch and secured 85 Legionnaires, or nine a day during that period.

The two successful membership

drives obtained some valuable information in the contest. One of the surprises was the fact that many veterans have not joined the Legion because they have not been asked to enter the post. Kass said that Legion officials often fail to make a canvass of homes in the neighborhood. Kass and Kolbe signed up scores of veterans for the Legion in previous membership contests.

MAY ADMIT FORMER ENEMIES

Oswley Favors Permitting Germans, Austrians and Russians to Enter Veterans' Federation.

Alvin Oswald, national commander of the American Legion, created a sensation in veterans' circles when he asked that veterans to disqualify themselves from their hearts and plan to admit German, Austrian and Russian war fighters into the International Veterans' Federation.

Clearly there must be some way in which we can speak to the men we fought and make them realize there is a better way of living among nations than that of hating one another. Oswald declared at the recent convention of the federation in Brussels that we can wish to deal with our former enemies if we haven't the heart to get together in peace. "May there has been no change of heart among our former enemies. There never will be unless we are strong enough to understand that to carry to them our peace message. From a Belgian positively we are entitled to regulations, but boarding and keeping our heart ancient peace will not be the price we earned as victors."

Charles Brown, president of the Legion in France, said that Oswald's proposal was a "favorable change of heart" from the enemy's attitude as soon as they entered the door to pay reparations.

AUXILIARY IS TO HAVE HOME

Alma (Kinn) Organization, With Only Twenty-five Members in Small Town, Set Example.

A memorial home, for use by all townspeople is the objective of a unit of the American Legion Auxiliary in Alma, Kan. The building, which the women workers of the organization propose to erect, will contain an auditorium, a gymnasium, and a service kitchen. On the second floor, quarters for the Legion and for the Auxiliary will be established. While the erection of such a home is not unusual in auxiliary circles, it is an extraordinary undertaking in the case of this unit, which has a membership of 25, in a town of only 750 inhabitants. The women own a site for the proposed home purchased at a cost of $500, and plan early erection of the community memorial.

A La Carte.
We had quarrelled at our dinner. Though I ordered quite a spread "If the woman does the paying," she snapped, "when all is said, then I tossed the check right at her and I left her in a daze. "Have your way," I sadly snorted. "Here's one time the woman pays!"

Mashed Bands at Convention.
Mashed bands from eight Ohio cities furnished music at a special concert at the annual convention of the American Legion held in Springfield. More than 350 musicians participated.

It Takes Time.
One who is a radical and wants to violently change the world should remember that the world is millions of years old and takes its time.

The President's Message To Congress

reminder to debtor nations that this government expects them to pay. He emphatically opposed cancellation.

He said claims of thousands of American citizens against Germany will be safeguarded.

Here he referred to the recent effort to aid Europe to stability and restoration through the Hughes plan. As to future policy in this regard, he said: "We shall persevere in well doing, not by force, but by reason."

FOREIGN SERVICE

In one sentence he recommended reorganization and improvement of the diplomatic and insular service.

FINANCES AND TAXES

Declaring domestic questions the main problem of the country, he said financial stability is vital. Drastic economies, preservation of the budget system, and reduction of taxes must be the main items in this program of financial stabilizing, he said.

He said he had treated more in detail of tax reduction in his message transmitting the budget. He approved the Mellon tax reduction plan, especially commending tax reduction on earned incomes, and "further abolition of admission, message and nuisance taxes." He said the "amusement and educational value of moving pictures ought not to be taxed." He opposed excess profits taxes, and said as well as national taxes should come down. Abolition of tax exempt securities by constitutional amendment be strongly urged.

TARIFF

The Fordney-McCumber law has secured abundant revenue and brought prosperity, he said, advising against tariff tinkering as "disturbing and harmful."

SHIPPING

Until the merchant fleet can be disposed of to advantage, it will be administered "as economically as possible" under plans devised by the Shipping Board.

PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS

Resumption of flood control work on the Mississippi and Colorado rivers; improvement of the Lakes Gulf waterway, development of the St. Lawrence waterway, and power development in "northeastern states" should all be encouraged.

RAILROADS

Congress should await the supreme court's decision on the recapture clause of the railroad law before legislating new on rate-making. The railroad labor board should be left undisturbed until some other tribunal is agreed on between capital and labor.

Permission consolidation of railroads should be tried, to be followed, if a failure, by compulsory consolidation. The freight rate structure should be reorganized at once.

COURTS

A commission should be named to revise the laws. Two more federal judges should be provided for the southern district of Georgia and two more in the Circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit. A commission should be created to expedite court business.

Government prison reform is needed. Two reformatories should be provided—one for women, one for first offenders. A bureau of criminal identification should be added to the department of justice.

PROHIBITION

The President referred to the treaty being negotiated with Great Britain to stop rum smuggling, and said the coast guard ought to be provided with fast motor boats to catch rum runners. Sources of liquor should be "rigidly regulated" and every effort made to stop interstate traffic. Urging co-operation of state and nation, he said disrespect for the prohibition law is a menace, and said citizens should not only obey the law, but let it be known they are opposed to others violating it.

THE NEGRO

He advocated strict anti-lynching laws, and formation of a commission to study the negro problem from industrial and economic angles.

CIVIL SERVICE

This should be maintained, Mr. Coolidge said. He advocated adding first, second and third-class postmasters, and the field force of the prohibition service to the classified list.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS

He opposed a "pork barrel" public buildings bill, but advocated an annual appropriation of $5,000,000 to provide needed government buildings.

REGULATORY LAWS

He advised laws to prevent harbor pollution, regulate aviation, radio interference, loading of ships, Alaskan fisheries. Revision of Federal trade commissioners are needed, he said.

ARMY AND NAVY

Both services have been reduced "to the danger point," he said. "Both should be strengthened. Additional places are needed for the Army, and additional submarine for the Navy."

Panama canal defenses should be perfected. Hating war, America should avoid "weakness that invites imposition."

INSULAR POSSESSIONS

He unqualifiedly endorsed administration of the Philippines by Gen. Leonard Wood and gave similar recommendations to all other administrators of island possessions.

EDUCATION AND WELFARE

He advocated child labor and minimum wage amendments to the constitution, and creation of an education department, with its head a member of the cabinet.

IMMIGRATION

Immigration should be carefully restricted, with immigrants selected abroad, and registration of aliens new, so that only those intending to become Americans could remain.

VETERANS AND BONUS

He said the veterans must be given every care; the service in their behalf "must be clean," promised to remedy evils disclosed by the senate investigation, and recommended that all government hospitals be permitted to treat free all veterans of all and that new hospitals be built for such purpose. He urged careful consideration of veterans' legislation to be proposed by the American Legion. Of the bonus, he disposed in this sentence:

"But I do not favor granting of a bonus."

COAL

Public welfare requires reduction of fuel prices, the president said. Neither should fuel families be tolerated. He urged careful consideration of the coal-commissioners' report said publicly about the industry was probably as far as the government could go in controlling wages and prices in normal times; opposed government ownership and operation of mines, and requested power to name a commission to act in fuel emergencies to prevent famines, profiteering and strikes.

REORGANIZATION

With exception of proposed combination of the war and navy departments, he approved the Brown plan of reorganization.

AGRICULTURE

No complicated scheme of relief, no resort to the Treasury will settle the farm problem, Mr. Coolidge said. "Simple and direct methods put into operation by the farmer himself are the only real sources for restoration," he declared. Measures of relief that may be afforded he listed thus: Reduction of national and local taxes; lowered freight rates; reduction of wheat acreage; cooperative marketing; government loans as emergency aid; cheaper fertilizer; courses in organization and cooperative marketing in agricultural schools; assistance for wheat exports, through the war finance corporation.

INTEREST GROWS NIGHTLY AT WEST SIDE TABERNACLE

That the evangelistic campaign now being conducted in the West Side Methodist tabernacle is attracting more than passing interest is evidenced by the fact that during the first week of Evangelist Paulson's labors here 2946 people attended these meetings. Last night the attendance was 320, making a total of 3265. The plate offerings for local expenses during the first week were more than $100.00.

Using as his text "I, if I be lifted up" John 12-32 the evangelist last evening spared no words in picturing the many evil forces that are working in Clearfield to drag old and young down to the very pit. Against these powers that pull downward, he

MUSCLE SHOALS

Subject to the right to take it back in war time, the government should sell Muscle Shoals, the President said, including a site for an auxiliary steam plant to replace the Gorgas plant, recently sold to the Alabama Power Co. The price isn't the principal consideration, he added.

He advocated a commission to negotiate for the most advantageous sale, and make recommendations to congress, and said conditions of sale should include agreement to produce cheap fertilizer and experiment with use of water power for this purpose.

RECLAMATION

Occupants of reclamation projects should be given relief from financial burdens, where necessary.

ROADS AND FORESTS

Both roads and reforestation should have continued government support.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE

This fundamental doctrine, "one of the foundations of our foreign relations" must be maintained, Mr. Coolidge said.

"But in maintaining it, we must not forget that a great change has taken place." He explained that our rise to power and greatness as a nation impose, in addition to the obligation to protect ourselves, the duty to "help give stability to the world."

He added: "We want idealism. We want that vision which lifts men and nations above themselves. But they must not be cloistered; they must not be impractical; they must not be ineffective."

"The time has come, he said, for a more practical use of moral power and America must speak with the voices of justice and mercy."

It matters not how old, persistent or poisonous the sore is. San Cura Ointment the powerful antiseptic will draw out the poison and promptly heal the sore.

So sure of this are the owners, the Thompson Medical Co., that they have authorized Woodward & McPherson to return the purchase price if San Cura Ointment doesn't do all this paper says it will do. No fairer offer was ever made.

"My arm was covered with twenty-four running sores and swollen to twice its natural size. San Cura Ointment relieved the pain, drew out the poison and healed the arm in an incredible short time. It is the greatest compound for healing I ever used."

JORDAN'S

There is no help, save in the uplifting power of the cross.

At the close of his address Evangelist Paulson sang a gospel song entitled "Back to my Father and home." During the singing of this a traveling salesman who had forsaken his own home, came to the altar and was soundly converted. He then addressed the assembly, and with tears streaming down his face, told of his own unhappy straying from home. At his pleading a number of others came and knelt at the altars for prayer. The meeting in every respect was one of the best of the campaign. Evangelist C. E. Boone, of Alton, N. Y., was among the visitors present.

Tonight the reserved section of the tabernacle will be occupied by members of the Trinity Methodist congregation and evangelist Paulson will speak on the theme "The Challenge of Youth."

DAIRY FACTS

Good Supply of Ice in Summer Big Investment

Nothing adds more to comfort in weather than a good supply of ice. In dairy farming it is an investment that pays a good return in the form of produce that it saves from spoiling. Moreover, ice is winter's crop and it may be had for the wintering.

The icehouse shown is made by the use of silo forms. Three doors allow weather than a good supply of ice to be stored, or removed with small amount of lifting.

Silo forms are obtainable. It takes surprisingly small amount of material to build such an icehouse, and it

House on Dairy Farm in Northern Illinois.

It keeps the ice in splendid condition with no danger of fire as in houses of old built of wood. The sawdust straw in which ice is ordinarily stored is a fire hazard that is minimized by the non-burning concrete walls.

Increase Productiveness of Herd by Better Sires

Keeping books with your cows is the sure way to build a herd of producers. By selecting cows on the records, discarding the unproductive ones, using only good pure bred sires, and raising better calves from best cows one is sure to increase productiveness of the herd.

It is also advisable to weigh each calf because it enables one to feed efficiently and if sickness, neglect or abuse has caused a cow to drop in milk a remedy may be applied before loss becomes serious.

Weighing milk creates interest among the milkers and encourages a milking and careful treatment of the cows.

The greatest source of loss to the dairy industry is the unproductive cow. Certain cheese factories paid one of patrons $4.77 for the product of 34 cows while it gave another $2.00 for the milk from 22 cows. It pays to keep records.

Lopiness in Milk Caused by Growth of Bacteria

Aropy or slimy condition of milk, sometimes noticeable after the milk is stored several hours, is caused by growth of a certain class of bacteria which gain entrance after the milk is drawn.

Though probably not more injurious in ordinary sour milk, this condition is especially troublesome, as the bacteria are passed along through vessels and otherwise to other milk and even to the dairies of an entire community.

The remedy is thorough washing and sterilizing of everything that in any way comes in contact with the milk, including cans, or bleaching powder, the rate of 12 or 16 ounces to the gallons of water is recommended. The dairy department of the Ohio government station as a safe and effective disinfectant.

Crushed Corn Best at New Jersey Station

At the New Jersey station ear corn compared to corn and cob meal feeding cows. The corn was broken the cob and compared to corn which in the ear. 6 pounds wheat and 10 pounds corn stover and 3.4 bushels of hay produced 202 pounds of milk with 30 pounds of fat for each cow, while 6 pounds corn and cob meal, 6 pounds wheat bran with same amount of hay and stover produced 221 pounds milk, 33 pounds fat. Thus crushed corn meal exceeded corn from ear by 64 per cent for milk and 18 per cent in yield of fat.

Give Heifer Calves. Here's a good rule to follow—save your heifer calves and sell your bull calves. If he is a pure bred he is worth good money to an older breeder. But if it is different with the heifers, give them a chance to show their worth in the milk pail.

Why Sell Rich Cream? Cream testing from 30 to 40 per cent makes better butter than 15 per cent. This reason a better price will be paid, which is to the advantage of the creamery patron.

Probe Other Side. Use men ascertain what is on the other side of the hurdle before jumping at conclusions.

MEATS OF VARIOUS KINDS

A savory dish of meat is usually the substantial and most enjoyed dish on the menu. Here are a few ways to vary the common meats:

Spare Rib With Sauer Kraut.—Select a good rib with enough meat on it to furnish the family amply. Roll it around a quart or two of sauer kraut, season the spare ribs and bake in a moderate oven for three or four hours. Serve on a hot platter with the spare rib on top of the kraut.

Deviled Steak.—Take one flank steak. Fry one large onion thinly sliced in two tablespoons of butter. Remove the onion when it is brown. Cut the steak into pieces two inches wide and three inches long. dredge with flour and fry in butter. Remove the steak from the frying pan, add to the butter one teaspoonful each of salt and mustard, three tablespoonfuls of vinegar and a tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce. Add two cups of hot water, return the steak to the pan, cover closely and simmer until the steak is very tender. Dish on a hot platter, pour the gravy over it and garnish with fried potatoes.

Veal Loaf.—Take three pounds of lean veal and one-half pound of uncooked ham, chop both very fine, add one teaspoonful of salt and one-half teaspoonful of pepper, three soda crackers rolled fine, then add three beaten eggs, three tablespoonfuls of cream and two tablespoonfuls of boiling water. Mix all together very thoroughly. Grease a bread pan and press the meat mixture well into it. Cover and bake for an hour in a moderate oven. Uncover and brown, baking another half hour.

Pork Chops With Fried Apples.—Place thick pork chops in a frying pan, add enough water to just cover the bottom of the pan. Cook uncovered, turning often, then when the water is evaporated fry brown, seasoning well. In a tablespoonful of fat fry thick slices of unpeeled, cored apple. Sprinkle with salt and sugar and cook until well browned on both sides. Serve in overlapping slices around the chops.

CHICKEN GUMBO MADE IN SOUTHERN STATES

Good Plan to Reduce Number of Unproductive Fowls.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Fowls which are no longer expected to lay well should be culled out of the flock in the fall to save feeding them. Roosters, and even young cockerels, are better eliminated to reduce the number of unproductive birds. The family may well profit by this process and enjoy chicken frequently. One of the most appetizing ways of serving it is to have chicken gumbo, which is neither a soup nor a stew, but which is hearty enough for a main luncheon or supper dish and needs no additional vegetables except rice.

If one be permitted to judge no citizen need go out of town to purchase Christmas novelties for the kiddies or grown-ups. The store windows are trimmed up with a thousand varieties of toys, and prices are not in excess of those of a few years ago. Thousands of people of all ages and nuts are arriving daily and if the capacity of each one is supplied it sure will take every bit of it. Already a few trees and greens have found their way into a few homes and are being shaped up for the trimmings so that Santa will be sure to find it when he comes sifting down the chimney to distribute his holiday remembrances to those who are deserving of them.

A little child of Mr. and Mrs. George Ardary, Bloomington, avenue, is very ill from an attack of pneumonia.

It is not a very flattering recommendation to come on our side streets and find so many of the boys of tender years smoking cigarettes. Where the small fry secures the papers and tobacco for their smokes seems to be a mystery, but a little bit of sleuthing on the part of the parent their source of supply might be discovered. The practice is spreading to a most alarming extent, and some methods should be adopted by which it could be checked before it is too late for the lads to break away from this health injurious habit.

The foot ball season of 1923 has ended but many of those who have followed the Curwensville High School team thro' its schedule of ten games are wondering just what the team did and with whom they contested, together with the scores. A HAPPY CHRISTMAS MORNING

Baby wondering what it is all about; little sister, eyes dancing, holding the big package contains a doll, and Bobby frankly impatient, waiting for the fascinating bundles to be unwrapped—doesn't that spell a noble k in the morning, December 25th? And, oh yes, Grandmother and Dad must not be left out of the picture.

Accessories

That Will Solve Many a Gift Problem

The Christmas Store

Joy is in the air! A new Christmas is at the threshold and from tip to toe our store is in complete readiness, prepared to make it the jolliest, merriest Christmas ever. The wealth, and genius of many lands is expressed in our merchandise. Every nook and corner of all the departments is filled with enticing lovely gifts that will bring pleasure and beauty into many peoples' lives. If you are on a pilgrimage for gifts you will find this store is a Christmas shrine worthy of your worship.

It's Easy to Make Girls Happy --

Especially when you help them complete their most treasured collection. "I only need a button"—remember when you heard Mary say that, or "A tiny will complete my set"—another. We have some especially fine French ivory toilet sets which may be purchased by piece or by set. And there is such a variety of ornamentations that you are sure to have no trouble in matching a set that started. It is very modern too.

JUST THE GIFT FOR MOTHER

An Umbrella

She will love to have a reason to keep for her very own use. These are new bahama and cambrian handles with comfy straps to slip over her hand. The silk is of the very best and mother will never fear the rain again as long as she is under its protection. Imagine how surprised and delighted she will be on Christmas day. Priced from—

$2.50 to $15.00

THE MORE PERSONAL GIFT

Lingerie

From one friend to another, there's nothing that makes lovelier gift. And the peppy hemstitching; the fine laces; the rosebuds of ribbon on these dainty garments just seem to inspire gift giving. There are appropriate suggestions galore in these Lingerie displays.

Colorful Gifts

Cheerfulness is personified in these bits of colored Glasware. A pair of candlesticks—a complete or a candy jar will surprise you in their ability to brighten up the home. They make such acceptable and inexpensive gifts.

50c to $5.00

A whiff from the Orient or the odor of an old fashioned garden—there's a perfume to suit every taste and personality. Which means, of course, that perfume makes a charming, and most acceptable gift.

GIFTS OF JEWELRY For Every Woman's Christmas

From the workshops of masters in their craft come lovely ornaments of silver and gold, of pearls and gems. And there is no denying this. It means that some come true to the woman whose Christmas box reveals one of these lovely gifts.

TO BEGIN at the end of a lovely strand of pearls, each bead blends with the next in unbroken harmony of size and color.
A COME OF JET—others flash green and blue stones—might have adorned a gay East Indian lady.

LAMPS

A New Reading Lamp for the library. Or a lovely great big floor lamp for the living room. If home can have too many lamps if they are of the right sort. And Mother may need a new boudoir lamp for her own room, too. They're all here. Priced from—
$4.95 to $27.50

EVERY WOMAN'S AVOIDABLE VANITY HER HANDBAG

She carries her Handbag everywhere and she realizes how it can mar or add to the effect of her costume. There's no doubt but what she will adore to receive a stunning new Handbag for Christmas. Especially one of the new ones; a suede envelope Bag handsomely embroidered in silk in Chinese design or a sumptuously beaded vanity Bag for dressier use. Prices range from—
$1.00 up to $25.00

A NEW RUCUSE WILL GIVE HER A CHRISTMAS THRILL

The fashion world has indeed fallen in love with Blouses, and it's not to be wondered at, considering they are more beautiful this year than ever before. Our new display is so alive with color and oriental loveliness, it is indeed a worthy Christmas display. How wonderful Sister would look in a long Russian Blouse edged with deep bands of fur. Come in and see them. They are priced very moderately.

MAKING THE CHILDREN'S CHRISTMAS HAPPY

There's no doubt of it—horns will too, and bells will ring—the ships will go to sea, and cross country fiars will speed across the living room—all on Christmas morning. It's so much fun, making Children happy on Christmas day. And you should see the display that has been established in this store. Mind you—

Santa Says--

That if all the little girls and boys in town Had been good every day of the year There's enough toys here to reward every child.

Horns and Drums—who ever heard of a Christmas without them. Santa has put a price tag on them which reads—
